Where Your Ship Comes In

It's more than fifty years ago now that Captain Joseph T. Jenes, of Bradford, Formsylvania, who had made a feature in oil, invested his millions in the development of South Mississippi

Among other enterprises, including the Gulf & Ship Island Rellevad, he made an initial investment of $1,441,000 on the channel to Ship Island and an additional $000,000 for building the pier. From 1902 to 1907, over one billion foot of lumber was shipped out of Guilport. Among imports were phosphotes, pyrites of iron, naval stores, crossete oil and makegany.

The pier and port piencesed by Gulfport's founder became vital to the industrial development of South Minimippi, as a primoral forcet was converted into a theiring area teening with new milks and temperature stills. The expansion of the Port of Guifport in more recent years, under the armorable of the city of Guifport, is a motion of recent. The port has nover been a financial liability; it has always paid its way.

Now there's a more on for the Port of Guilport to become a state-owned and operated project. On either side of us, New Orleans and Mobile have fully demonstrated what can be done with expects and imports with the prestige and pressure of a state behind such activities. The deliberanement of King Cotton in Mississippi is preducing an acute if not a chaotic situation, as young men abandon the farms and leave the state to seek employment elecwhere.

Every state in the Union on tidewater has demonstrated that nothing stimulates the industrial development of the whole state like part presention. Mississippi, which more than any other commonwealth needs this industrial development, is the only tidemeter state that has falled to build he port as a strategic and major undertaking. At long last, action in this direction now becomes one of the imperatives.

Captain J. T. Jones, all on his own, more than 30 years age, new what so many even new fall to see - that the Port of Gulfpert is Mississippits must neglected appartunity and promising most. Isn't it about time for all Mississipping

Mrs. Lewis is shown receiving a commendation from W. T. Blacklidge, District Traffic Manager as her Chief Operator, Mrs. Suc Quint looks on.

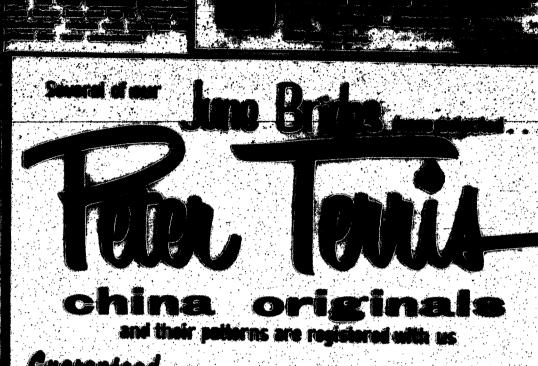

Two other Mississippians, Mrs. Lillian King, Service Assistant of Clarksdale and Shurley Difford, Greenwood Line Foreman, received life-saving citations.

Mrs. King sent a doctor to a stricken customer who could only dial the "O" on her telephone; while Mr. Dillard used the life-saving knowledge secured by telephone training to revive a choking year-old tot.

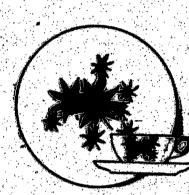

Here are typical acts of good-neighborliness per-formed in line of duty by members of the telephone team of 1900 fellow Mississippians who are busy at switchboards, installing and maintaining service, work-ing atop poles, in city manholes, at deals or test honeless—operating a great telephone network to serve your everyday communication needs.
